

Why join First National Bank Alaska's Management Associate program?

The answer is simple. You gain valuable knowledge and experience in the banking industry, travel to locations around our great state and help customers achieve their goals on a daily basis. If you still need convincing, just ask Fairbanks loan officer and Vice President Jennifer Mahlen, she's been there.

"Gaining employment in the financial industry is a catch-22 situation. You need experience to get hired, but you can't get the experience without being hired."

"The great thing about the Management Associate program is it gave me that experience. Thanks to the program, I am now a loan officer and vice president."

"My early education in the program, about various bank operations, also set me up with an internal network of contacts. Even after 15 years, I'll never pretend to know it all. But the depth and breadth of experience represented by my co-workers is something I value. And everyone is so willing to help; I don't feel intimidated about asking for information."

"Now, the tables have turned and I'm often the Management Associate trainer instead of trainee. I try to demonstrate to those new employees that this career is one I truly enjoy. I'm able to get out in the community, meet new people, and help Alaskans who are passionate about their business."
